Cheatgrass Dreams

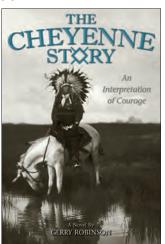

written and illustrated by Theodore Waddell

The West has a storytelling history, and everyone has a story. This is artist Theodore Waddell's story—an illustrated mosey through the landscape, livestock, and colorful characters that made up his life as a cattleman in a remote part of Central Montana. The essays that compose this memoir have much in common with his art. They are frank, evocative sketches that deftly combine the abstract and the literal to effectively communicate the persistent struggle and beauty of ranch life.

The Cheyenne Story An Interpretation of Courage, A Novel

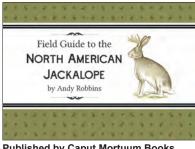

by Gerry Robinson

Five months to the day after Custer's defeat by the Northern Cheyenne at the Little Bighorn, the U.S. Army descended on the tribe's main winter camp. Cheyenne Sweet Medicine Chief, Little Wolf, was told they would come and warned his people to leave for safety. But tradition and the protestations of a hot-blooded young leader prevent his warnings from being taken seriously. This is the balanced and compelling story of the ensuing battle—its origins and the devastating results—told beautifully from the perspective of both Little Wolf and his brother-in-law, the government interpreter, Bill Rowland.

Placebocracy and Other Ailments A Classical Liberal Take on America Today

by Mark Hartwig

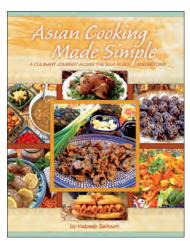

An examination of America's present political, economic and sociocultural conditions from a traditional classical liberal perspective. Presented as a daisy-chain of essays, the author proposes that American democracy is imperiled as a result of institutionalized ignorance; that we no longer understand even the most basic political and economic principles of American democracy. The result, that as a nation, we are subjected to false front issues and solutions that ignore the real problems facing Americans.

A Woman's Way West:

In and Around Glacier National Park, 1925-1990

by John Fraley

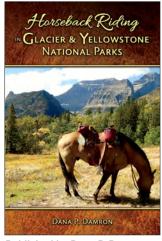

After a string of personal tragedies, 24-year-old Doris Ashley left her lowa farm in 1925 and rode the train west to Glacier National Park. So began her love affair with the wild Crown of the Continent—the rugged mountains and the equally rugged people who lived and worked there, the bears and beaver and elk, rushing rivers full of trout, and fat, free-for-the-picking huckleberries. After a stormy romance, Doris married the Cut Bank park ranger and together they forged a happy if hard-won life based on their own wits and surprisingly varied talents. This is Doris' story.

Bleeding Spirits:

A Combat Soldier's Memoir of the Vietnam War (1968-1969)

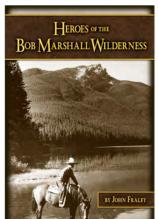

by former Infantry Sergeant Robert E. Jewell

This heart-rending & inspiring memoir captures the realities of war and post-war life from a soldier's perspective. Written largely as a collection of memories about his time in Vietnam, Bleeding Spirits is both raw and honest and a moving testament to the author's belief that, "The events of life are our teachers." Ultimately a story of survival and thriving, this intensely human book—published posthumously by family and friends—is a resource and window into the untold workings of war and its warriors, the challenges and joys of life off the battlefield, and the struggle and beauty of finding a sense of peace.

Searching for Yellowstone

Ecology and Wonder in the Last Wilderness by Paul Schullery

In 1997 Yellowstone celebrated its 125th anniversary as a national park, the keystone in the federal system of reserved and protected places. The celebration was somewhat marred by debates over wolf reintroduction, road improvement, resort building, and "bioprospecting," the search for economically useful plant materials. Schullery, a longtime resident and student of the park, tells us that such debates are not new.
